Freshmen collecting for needy

Hearty Romulus High School freshman fanned out over the city recently to collect more than 1,000 cans of food for the neediest city families this holiday season.

Guided by Class of '96 advisers Kathy Abdo and Diane Terry, the dedicated youths conducted a food drive within the school and then went door-to-door in their neighborhoods.

Abdo said more than 10 cases of food have already been transported to the Helping Hand Agency of Romulus for use during the Christmas season.

The freshman class representatives will continue taking donations throughout the holiday period, Abdo said.

Those still wishing to donate to the cause can contact any member of the freshman class, or call Romulus Senior High School, 941-2170.

Airport growth options grow

By AL POST
ANP Staff Writer

Wayne County Deputy Executive Michael Duggan told Romulus City Council members Monday night that he hoped to be back to Romulus this summer with detailed plans on airport expansion, unless Wayne County commissioners "do something crazy."

Duggan, without public notice, appeared at the Romulus City Council meeting to reveal various plans Wayne County has at Metro Airport, if the $3 passenger facility charge is approved by the Wayne County Commissioners.

At meeting time, county commissioners still had not approved the ticket surcharge that is projected to add $30 million annually to the airport coffers.

The surcharge has already been approved by the Federal Aviation Administration and needs only the county approval to allow the $3 fees to be collected as early as Jan. 1, 1993.

But a political battle has developed between County Executive Ed McNamara and county commissioners as threats and doubts of such a quick approval continued to be placed before the press by political insiders.

Duggan, armed with three maps relating to newly created Metro Airport flight patterns, said plans are under way to give Romulus homeowners impacted by future airport growth three options.

The options include:

- Property buyouts by the airport.

- Home sound-proofing at the expense of the county.

- A 10-year property assurance period during which time the airport would compensate affected homeowner's for any sales price loss if it was caused by airport issues.

Duggan's stop in Romulus was one of about a dozen he is making before communities affected by the airport expansion and noise issues.

The recently approved FAA flight patterns which divides take-offs over a wider area will have little impact on Romulus residents, Duggan said, but it will aid Dearborn and New Boston residents who were suffering from a disproportionate percentage of flights daily.

"The new flight patterns (similar to the test ones used a year ago) have created an 80 percent reduction in complaint calls," he said.

"Is everyone happy? No. Will we ultimately be able to make everyone happy? No," Duggan said.

"But Wayne County and airport officials are working hard to make sure that since most communities receive economic benefits from the location of the airport, all should also share in its noise problems," Duggan explained.

Duggan provided a printed breakdown on cost plans for the $750 million airport expansion program.

He also promised to supply a color-coded map to the city to help explain to local citizens who might be covered under the triple financial offer the county is making.

Since the map was computerized, Duggan said, it is not definite which Romulus neighborhoods would be included at this time.

Among the plans unveiled for the Romulus City Council were:

- $88 million is being allocated for purchase of homes, soundproofing of homes and

First Romulus Marine in Somalia

By AL POST
ANP Staff Writer

The first Romulus Marine has arrived in Somalia to assist in the massive food distribution effort for thousands of starving Africans.

S. Michael Lee Smith called his Romulus home on Dec. 7 and said sadly "Mom I won't be home for Christmas. I just got orders to go to Somalia."

Joelene Smith said the call saddened her a bit, because she felt strongly her 23-year-old Marine son, (who had only recently returned from Kenya) would be home with the family this holiday season.

Michael is slated to be discharged in June 1993, she said, so he was "surprised" when his Marine commander informed him and others at Camp Pendleton in California, that he was being sent back to Africa.

Asked what her son's big-

gest worry was going to Somalia, she said, "He is concerned most about the health conditions the Marines will face there."

As a mother, she in turn is deeply worried about the media reports of the young renegade gunmen riding about Somalia, chewing drugs and firing their automatic weapons in a reckless manner.

A second son, David L. Smith, age 25, also will be missing the Christmas celebration this year as he is undergoing specialized training with the Air Force in Oklahoma.

"David wrote to us in November and informed us he wouldn't be home this holiday," the disappointed mother said, "but we felt at least Michael would make it home."

Smith won't be home alone for the holidays—even though her two oldest sons are away in the military.

"We're planning an old-fashioned Christmas with our other four children," she said proudly, "and looking forward to June or July 1993 when we will have a major homecoming party, Christmas and Thanksgiving all in one."

Both sons are due to return to civilian life in June, "so we will have to save some of our Christmas spirit until then," she said.

"Michael hopes to enter the law enforcement field, when he gets back," she said.

Those remaining home to celebrate Christmas 1992 will be her husband, David, an employee of Motor Wheel in Ypsilanti; and her four younger children, Yvonne, 15, a sophomore at Willow Run High School; Joel, 13, a student at Romulus Junior High School; and Matthew, 10, and Stephen 8, both students at Wick Elementary School in Romulus.

While the average number of children in a family has dipped to about 1.5 nationally, Smith is proud of her old-fashioned family life—styles.

And that tremendous feeling of love is personified at Christmas time, she said, whether it be now in December or next July.

Romulus businessman Bill Crane has been named the 13th annual Person of the Year by the Greater Romulus Chamber of Commerce.

Crane was selected by the Person of the Year Committee following a "rigorous selection process," Chamber Mark Lewkowicz stated in a press release.

An awards banquet to honor Crane, owner and operator of the Crane Funeral Home, is planned for March 26, 1993 at the Holiday Inn in Romulus.

Tickets costing $30 each are available through the chamber office at 31200 Industrial Expressway at Metro Airport.

Among the accomplishments listed for Crane was his most recent chairmanship of the Veteran's Memorial project on Wayne Road (adjacent to City Hall). The Rotary Club project he spearheaded was finalized with a dedication on July 4.

A public hearing on a request by Air Conditioning Products to establish an industrial development district on Ecorse Road has been scheduled for 7 p.m. Jan. 4, 1993.

The petitioner seeks to establish the district on the 5.52 acre property at 30350 Ecorse Road in preparation for expanding the current building by 28,000 square feet.

Christopher Mebus, a company spokesman, wrote to City

Clerk Linda Choate on Nov. 5 stating that the company currently employs 40 persons and hopes to add 50 new jobs following the expansion.

"I understand the first step in this process is to form the Industrial Development district," Mebus wrote, "and I understand that the formation of such a district does not necessarily mean we will qualify for a tax abatement."

The Romulus Roman newspaper will once again become the official newspaper for the city of Romulus in 1993.

City Finance Coordinator Lynn A. Conway revealed in her memorandum to City Council members that five newspaper companies were notified and other bids were sought on Nov. 11, 1992 via a newspaper ad in the News Herald newspaper.

Only two bids were received and opened on Nov. 30, 1992, Conway said.

Conway wrote, "City Clerk Linda Choate recommends," that the bid of the Associated Newspapers be accepted.

"If you concur," Conway wrote to the council, "please award the bid to the lowest bidder." The Associated Newspapers bid was $4.26 per column inch compared to the News Herald bid of $4.50.

Choate's recommendation was officially read into the record by Mayor Beverly McAnally.

Without debate, City Council members voted unanimously to accept the Associated Newspaper bid.

Romulus hospital worker honored

Anthony Dropiewski, a resident of Romulus, has been named employee of the month by Wyandotte Hospital and Medical Center.

Dropiewski, an emergency department assistant, said the most memorable event in his career was witnessing a stabbing victim brought to the emergency room and the attending doctor beginning an open heart massage.

"That day I decided that if I could withstand that, I could handle anything that happened," he said.

Dropiewski started in the emergency room in March 1986 as the house attendant on the night shift. He was promoted to emergency department assistant in 1987.

His nominating petition said, "He is a cheerful, polite individual who is willing to jump in and offer his assistance at any given moment."

His co-workers say his is dependable and trustworthy, especially in times of crisis.

While he was born and raised in Wyandotte, Dropiewski, and his new wife, Judy, now reside in Romulus.

When not working, they enjoy fishing, traveling, camping, gardening and watching new movie releases.

Bandits victimize man on the phone

A 28-year-old Taylor man told police he was robbed by two bandits while using an outdoor phone at a gas station at the intersection of Van Born and Inkster roads in Romulus.

The victim said the two pedestrian bandits walked up to him shortly after 3 a.m. Monday.

One man armed with a black 9 millimeter handgun told him "This is a stick-up. Give me your money," while the other man went through his pockets, he told police.

After taking the victim's money the robbers fled across Inkster Road into Taylor, police said.

Barth School students enjoy holiday dance

Barth Elementary School students attended the first dance of the year last month. Entertainment included music (both rap and slow dance styles) and entertainment by Horace "Frog" Person, a Barth parent and disc jockey.

Judy Jackson, student activities director, said pizza and pop were served to the participants and "students were sorry to see the dance come to an end at 5 p.m."

The next dance is planned for January or February 1993.

A 31-year-old Romulus woman told police her purse was grabbed Saturday night as she stepped out of her car on Smith Road.

The victim said just as she began to walk to her apartment in the 35000 block of Smith Road, a tall youth ran by and took her purse containing cash, her identification papers and some food stamps.

The youth was described as being a black male with a thin build wearing a dark jacket, blue jeans and white tennis shoes.

Wick students aid local fire victims

By AL POST
ANP Staff Writer

A Romulus family that has a history of aiding others under distress, received assistance in kind recently after their home was badly damaged by fire.

On Oct. 25 a fire damaged the home of Larry and Pat Flank on Herman Street in Romulus. The family, including 5-year-old son, Robby, were not at home when the fire which cost them most of their personal possessions, occurred.

Robby is a kindergarten student at Wick Elementary School and as news of the tragedy spread throughout the school, the staff and students decided they wanted to help.

Sixth graders under the direction of their teacher, Diane Golka, composed and then typed a letter of appeal on the Flank family's behalf and sent it home with all the students.

The students also created boxes for cash donations to the family and visited each class at Wick School to personally collect the gifts.

In addition, the students attended a parent and teacher conference and made them aware of their fund drive effort.

Michael Lee, one of the stuents, explained that he enjoyed helping out in the effort, because "it's fun to help others."

The students also arranged to have the message broadcast on the school public address system.

According to school secretary Carol Bales, "Students, their parents and others contributed clothes, furniture and other types of articles that the Flank family lost in the fire.

"The irony is that the Flank family for years adopted another family to help out with Christmas gifts," Bales said, "so it is fitting that they be aided in their time of need."

As a climax to the fund drive, Pat Flank was invited to a school "shower" at which time the financial donations and other gifts were presented to the family.

Any future gifts for the Flank family can be channeled through Wick School staff members, teacher Sharon Popek said.

The Flank family is currently living with young Robby's grandmother in Romulus.

Pat Flank expressed her family's gratitude to all those who have aided them since the fire damaged their home.

Neighbor found guilty in double slaying

A 67-year-old Huron Township man who shot to death two neighbor women was found guilty on two counts of first-degree murder in Detroit Recorder's Court.

He will be sentenced on Jan. 7. The penalty for first-degree murder is life imprisonment without parole.

James Elwood Brooks admitted to Huron Township police that he killed his next-door neighbors, Susan Pittman and Christine Puckett, on May 5.

He was also convicted of committing a firearm felony during the five-week trial.

Brooks and the two women had long-standing disagreements centering around a privacy fence the women were constructing between the two properties.

According to testimony in Recorder's Court, Brooks accused the women of building the fence on his property, and threatened them with a shovel handle. One of the women began taking photographs of Brooks and the other called the police. By the time the police arrive, eight minutes later, the two women were dead.

Brooks was said to have fired at them from his side door and then approached them to shoot again at close range

Toddler injured in fall at city facility

Westland Fire Department officials were still unsure Monday morning how an 18-month-old boy fell 30 feet into a racquetball court at the Melvin G. Bailey Recreation Center early Sunday afternoon.

"We are only offering speculation at this time," said Battalion Chief George Riley. "It appears as if the child was being watched by a young girl and that the girl lifted the child up to the 4-foot ledge of the wall.

"Apparently the child was watching the activity on the racquetball court and fell into the netting on the court. The netting pulled the anchors from the walls and the child fell into the court," Riley said.

Westland fire department personnel immediately responded to the scene where the child was placed in a cervical spine brace and transported to St. Mary's Hospital in Livonia.

Doctors at St. Mary's Hospital stabilized the toddler and then he was transported by helicopter to Mott's Childrens Hospital in Ann Arbor.

"He is currently in the pediatric intensive care unit, and is in serious condition," Riley said.

At the time of the incident, the child's parents were shopping at Twelve Oaks Mall in Novi.

"As soon as we had him in the ambulance someone was trying to notify the parents who were shopping."

Riley believes the child suffered serious neck and head injuries.

He also stated that the child and his parents are residents of Commerce Township.

British veteran cited

By AL POST
ANP Staff Writer

William Francis Andrews, a 93-year-old English Army veteran of World War I who died Thanksgiving Day, was cited with an official memorial resolution last week by City Councilman William Wadsworth.

Wadsworth said Mr. Andrews always was very proud of his English Army experience. This past July 4, Wadsworth revealed, he asked Mr. Andrews if he was going to attend the Veterans Monument dedication.

Mr. Andrews, whose health had begun to fail, said, "If you think the only English veteran in Romulus is going to miss this adventure-you are mistaken."

Wadsworth also credited Mr. Andrews, who was his neighbor, with being one of the main persons who talked him into running for the City Council post the first time.

"But with his death, I didn't lose a political supporter, I lost a real friend," Wadsworth said.

William Andrews was born on Oct. 12, 1899 in Cornwall, England. He came to the U.S.

The late William Andrews

by boat in 1919. While working at the Ford Motor Co.'s River Rouge plant years later, Wadsworth said, Mr. Andrews became acquainted with company founder Henry Ford and proudly displayed a photo in his basement for years of Ford and himself.

In the past Mr. Andrews was active with the local Kiwanis Club (was a former club president) and the Senior Citizen Center.

Personally, he loved to do crossword puzzles, his wife Rhada, a retired Barth Elementary School teacher, said and easily completed them almost to the end of his life.

She said her husband loved his garden, particularly since his retirement. One of his favorite garden varieties was gooseberries grown from plants he purchased in Canada, she said. They reminded him of his old lifestyle in England.

"We have been neighbors of the Wadsworth's for about 17 years," Andrews said. "In fact they gave him one of their cats, Noline."

Mr. Andrews also is survived by two daughters, Deborah Andrews and Evelyn Korri; a son, Howard (Jean) Andrews of St. Clair; four grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren.

The funeral was at the Crane Funeral Home and interment was in Michigan Memorial Park of Flat Rock.

New principal appointed

By AL POST
ANP Staff Writer

A 45-year-old Detroit middle school assistant principal has been offered the job as Romulus Junior High School principal.

The junior high position became available this summer, when Principal Jesse Meriwether was named the new district athletic director.

The position is currently being filled by Acting Principal Melvin Kimbrough, who previously served as assistant principal.

Assistant Romulus School Superintendent Dr. Terrel LeCesne said Andrea Henrietta Swan Williams, currently the assistant principal of Drew Middle School on Wyoming Street in Detroit, has been offered the position on the recommendation of Superintendent of Schools Dr. William Bedell. She was selected from a final field of three candidates.

Bedell said, "Ms. Williams has a wealth of experience in moving a junior high to a middle school concept-which is the direction we're going."

Bedell added, "Drew Middle School has been cited as an exemplary middle school."

Members of the board of education will meet at 7 p.m. Monday to finalize the agreement (including salary and starting date) with Williams, Bedell said.

According to her resume, Williams is a native of Tuskegee, Al. and has served in her current position since 1988.

Her current job description lists her duties as assisting with the creation of a "positive school climate; developing and implementing a school plan of action; appraising staff performance; developing and monitoring a school budget; providing assistance to teachers in planning, classroom management, student evaluation and the delivery of the instructional process."

She graduated from Southern University High School in Baton Rouge, La. in 1965 and Western Michigan University in 1969.

Williams earned her masters in science degree in health administration at the University of Michigan in 1978.

Her post graduate work in the field of education administration has been at Oakland University of Rochester, Eastern University in Ypsilanti and Wayne State University in Detroit.

Holiday services planned

By AL POST
ANP Staff Writer

Holiday religious activities ranging from caroling to progressive dinners are currently being planned at local churches.

Christmas carolers from the Community United Methodist Church of Romulus will begin caroling at 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

The Rev. J.D. Landis, church pastor, said the group will meet at the church located at Olive and Bibbins and then travel about the community singing special Christmas tunes. Any area person is invited to join the singing group, he said.

At 11 a.m. Dec. 20, a special Christmas program is slated, he said. Finally a candlelight Christmas Eve service is planned for 6 p.m. Special harp music will be highlighted.

A special children's Christmas musical program also is planned at 6 p.m. Sunday at the Romulus Wesleyan Church on Goddard Road.

A candlelight Christmas

Eve service is planned at 6 p.m. at the Wesleyan Church. During that service the last in the series of advent holiday candles also will be lighted.

Then on New Years Eve, Pastor Donald McClellan revealed Wesleyan church members will take part in a progressive supper. The supper group will travel to three member's homes and then finish at the Wesleyan Church.

Another candlelight service will later begin at 11:30 p.m. and continue past the midnight hour.

Repairs to sewer line near Help for the beleaguered Smith Street residents, who have fallen victim to repeated water main breaks in recent months, moved a step closer Monday night.

The council unanimously approved an ordinance amendment to take $246,727 from the city Water and Sewer Loan Repayment and Reserve Escrow Account to help pay for a new 12-inch pipe line to be installed as a replacement for the Smith Road Water Line.

Mayor Beverly McAnally and Department of Public Works Director James Panos revealed Dec. 7 that numerous Smith Road residents were being impacted by the constant water breaks in the 51-year-old pipe line.

Panos had said the normal life span of such pipes is about 45 years. The recent outbreak of continual water line breaks reached an intolerable level as 27-30 breaks were reported in a very short period of time.

McAnally said some of the residents were being forced to store water in their bathroom tubs to protect themselves from future water breaks.

Panos said the upgrading of the piping system from 8-inch to 12-inch pipe could cost up to $355,000, but he hopes the bids will come in well under that level.

McAnally said the larger pipe sizing will be sought so that the city will be prepared for any future building growth in adjoining areas.

Panos said once a contractor is selected and the project is begun, it could take as little as a week to install the 3,400 feet of piping. The only major threat to such a work project at this time of year, he said, would be a major snowfall.

- $65 million will be spent on fourth parallel runway construction.

- $23 million for airport improvement land acquisitions.

- $15 million for an improved airport safety and lighting system to protect against future air collisions.

- $13 million for aircraft parking and apron reconstruction.

- $368 million for construction of a midfield international terminal.

- $127 million for renovation of the North Terminal Complex including a new Concourse G.

As explained earlier, Duggan said the airport plans to purchase 150 homes in Romulus, soundproof another 520 homes and give another 890 home owners in Romulus a choice of the above listed three financial options.

A citizen, Mary Collins, complained about the lack of public notice on Duggan's visit. "Over 200 persons turned out when he appeared in Huron Township and other areas," she complained. "Look at here (three non-media persons were in the audience)."

Mayor Beverly McAnally accepted the responsibility and said if the Romulus public wants a meeting with Duggan she will be glad to help set one up in the near future.

More Detroit suburban travelers

If you advertise anything having to do with travel, this is the best possible place for your ad.

Because this is one of the fifty SPRING newspapers.

And the combined circulation of all these SPRING newspapers is 728,609. That is more than double the daily suburban circulation of The Detroit News (288,960) or Free Press (358,553).

In fact, SPRING's suburban circulation is greater than the two metro dailies' combined!

And that's not all.

According to the 1991 Belden newspaper readership study, SPRING reaches more of the affluent suburban shoppers who have more to spend—and who spend more.

► 146,100 more suburban Detroit vacationers than the daily News (55,400 more than the Free Press).

► 91,800 more suburban Detroit purchasers of airline tickets than The News (9,700 more than the Free Press).

► 80,700 more suburban business travelers than The News (7,900 more than the Free Press).

More suburban boat owners.

More suburban travel agency clients.

Simply put, one order in SPRING delivers more.

Shouldn't you be advertising in SPRING more?

The cat's meow Presidential feline look-alike sought

The search for a Presidential look-alike continues. Somewhere in this area there lurks a double for the celebrity soon to leave the governor's mansion in Arkansas for the White House.

Surely, we can find a double somewhere for this newly-famous and often photographed member of the first family.

No, we don't want Bill or Hillary. And perhaps we'll search for a Chelsea look alike later on, but right now we're interested in the one member of the family who has really peaked the interest of the press corps.

The area feline who most resembles Socks, the Clinton family cat, will be awarded a large Christmas stocking loaded with items designed to please even the most finicky member of the species.

Cats wishing to enter need only have their owners submit a snapshot of them, looking their most presidential, of course, to the judges at: Associated Newspapers, P.O. Box 578, Wayne, Mich., 48184 prior to Jan. 1, 1993.

Sorry, we cannot guarantee the return of the photos and owners must include the name of the cat, age, along with the name and address of the owner, along with a phone number where they can be reached during normal business hours.

The decision of the judges will be final.

Pen pals

Special program pairs students and seniors

By PATRICIA BROWN
ANP News Editor

Senior citizens who attend the Westland Friendship Center have been given the opportunity to see life through the eyes of a child.

Students who attend Titus Elementary School in Westland are participating in an intergenerational project which was devised by fifth-grade teacher Carolyn Washington.

Washington came up with the idea of having students and senior citizens get to know each other by corresponding as pen pals.

"I wanted any child to be able to have letter-writing skills and have someone to work with," Washington said. "I also wanted them to have someone who would write back to them."

Another reason for starting the program was to give the children someone else in their lives with whom to share their experiences.

"Whenever you walk through a shopping mall you always see senior citizens who are caring for small children," Washington said. "With moms and dads both being really busy, they will also have the senior citizen to share with them."

"I wanted pen pals, but I didn't want peer pen pals, but I wanted to make sure it would be with someone they could develop a relationship with," she added.

Last week the senior citizens and students met at the Friendship Center so that the

2 face robbery charge

By MARGO DEWEY
ANP Feature Editor

Two Romulus men are expected to appear in Recorder's Court this month to face charges of armed robbery.

Shane Bisson, 19, and Jeffrey Sucharski, 22, appeared for an examination Dec. 14 before 29th District Court Judge Carolyn Archbold, and the $25,000 cash bond for Bisson and $50,000 cash bond for Sucharski was continued.

The men are accused of robbing the Dairy Mart on Wayne Road at 12:25 p.m. Dec. 5, according to Wayne police Lt. Mel Drews.

"The arrests were made by officer Dan Sanford after he was given a description of a vehicle traveling near Van Born and Wayne," Drews said. "The suspect was stopped at Beverly."

The two suspects allegedly demanded cash from the cashier at Dairy Mart, and a gun was implied, according to Drews.

No injuries occurred. Sucharski has an extensive record for armed robbery, according to Drews.

If both Romulus men are found guilty of armed robbery, they could spend up to life in prison for the felony offense, according to Wayne police.

Holiday lights displayed in park senior citizens could choose their pen pal students. All of the students' names were placed in a box and one-by-one the senior citizens chose a student by pulling his or her name out of the box.

Then each student met one-on-one with their pen pal and had lunch together.

"It was really a tender time," Washington said. "Some seniors brought picture albums in and showed students their pictures."

One of the students brought a pad of paper for her senior pen pal in case her pen pal didn't have any paper, Washington said.

"The seniors were really excited and the students were really excited," Washington said. "When we got back to the classroom the students wanted to start writing their pen pals, but we had planned to wait until after the holidays."

The students will write to their intergenerational pen pals twice a month, according to Washington.

Washington added that the project wouldn't have been possible if it wasn't for the help of Senior Resources Department Director Sylvia Kozorosky-Wiacek.

"It's a really nice program," Kozorosky-Wiacek said. "This will help eliminate the generation gap and the students will be able to relate to older people."

Kozorosky-Wiacek said that approximately 38 senior citizens will participate in the project.

Washington has 34 students who are participating.

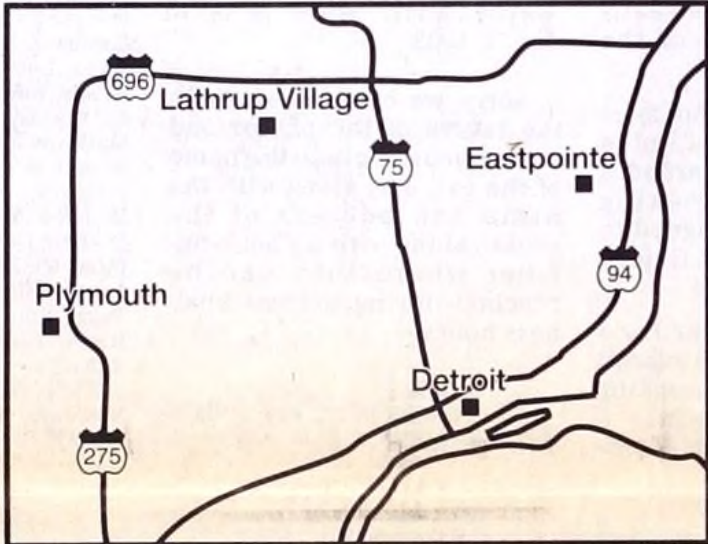

The groups are expected to meet about four times each year, Kozorosky-Wiacek said.

Making the acquaintance of their new pen pals last week were, from left, Annabel Fatal-ski and Darriett Maddox, Rose-marie DiMassa and Abigail Nichols and Dolores Marsk and Al Miller. The seniors and the students will be corresponding about their experiences in a co-operative program with the schools and Westland Friend-ship Center. At left Annabel Fatal-ski and Darriett Maddox become better acquainted. ANP photo by Ken Garner

Mixed emotions

The photographs have moved us to tears.

The reports of the devastation, cruelty and starvation of tiny children and adults in Somalia is disconcerting and distressing. No one can help but be moved by the plight of these innocent, dying people.

We've looked into the eyes of mothers facing the prospect of their 18-year-old sons traveling halfway around the world to perhaps die at the hands of some other mother's son. We've shared her fear and her terror that her beloved child whom she has nurtured and loved for all of his brief life may be killed or hurt.

This is a tortuous situation in which we cannot seem to find the right or the wrong. We know that these people must be helped. We also know that we do not want young Americans to die.

As the military forces land in Somalia and begin the humanitarian effort to pave the way for food and relief to these mistreated and starving people, we feel both relief and dread.

Will young Americans give up their lives in this effort? What effect will this separation have on some of these soldiers as they are separated from their families? How will the sights and horrors they are inevitably going to witness change them?

One thing is for certain. Not one of those men and women sent to Somalia will return unchanged by what they will see and experience. Not one of them will come home with the same attitudes about life, responsibility and service. This effort to help save these people will have a far greater cost than many have yet contemplated.

We do not criticize this effort. We cannot bear the thought of one more child dying in the street of starvation, withered and bloated. We do not question the motives or the need for help in this situation.

The cost, however, may be greater than even anticipated.

It is a worthy and necessary effort. But we cannot forget the fear in the eyes of the mothers whose children have had to forego the end of their adolescence to protect the basic human rights of others.

There is no easy answer to this one.

An interesting turn of events

The recent angst and anger expressed by many old-line military men regarding the inclusion of gays in the service is most interesting.

We find it of some note that these men, whom we've noticed seem to be of nearly any age and demeanor, do share a common trait.

They all seem to be share a great many of the character and personality traits as the men recently involved in the "Tailhook" scandal where a multitude of Air Force pilots found great sport and enjoyment in sexually harassing several female members of the organization during a convention.

We're continually amazed that these same individuals are now protesting the possibility that they could become the target of the sexual interest, comments, or attention to which they have subjected women for years.

They protest that those of an alternative sexual preference might force their attentions on others, that their inclusion in the military would impact negatively on morale and that the confidence and trust of those serving their country would be eroded by sharing quarters with those whose sexual preferences might not match theirs.

What they will not acknowledge is that it has been happening for decades, they just didn't know it. Gays in the military kept their own counsel and did not discuss their sex lives or pretended to have a more conventional interest to avoid just such prejudice.

The sexual preference of an individual should not have any impact on their chosen career. If the personal life of any individual interferes with their job performance or their career choice, that is a matter to be dealt with on an individual basis.

We suggest that it be respected as a private, individual matter and be handled with some dignity. These days, the military could use the change.

Community commitment earns praise

To the editor:

On behalf of the Charter Township of Van Buren and the Department of Public Safety, we would like to thank everyone who provided assistance during the recent tragedy on Belleville Lake.

The spirit of cooperation and dedication shown by friends and neighbors of the families, and the help of the countless number of citizens who were touched by this incident, is a tribute to our community. There are no words to express our feelings as we observed those who went above and beyond what was expected to assist us and, importantly, the families in need.

The Department of Public Safety can not accomplish their mission without the valuable support of the community and incidents like this pull us all together as one.

Thank you again for the assistance and commitment to our community.

David Jacques,
Van Buren Township Supervisor

Mark Perkins, Director of Public Safety

School program defended

To the editor:

I am a fourth-grade teacher in the Plymouth-Canton School District. I read your recent article disputing the elementary philosophy of the district and was outraged.

In my school this program is very successful. The children I now have, have been through a program that we teachers have been developing for seven to eight years. We have built upon a foundation of the past and have added to it with innovative and researched techniques. We are continually improving and changing as more is found out about how children learn. Our main focus is always what is best for the child.

My students, who have been through the program from kindergarten through third grade, came to me with more skills

They are all readers and have developed strategies as well as an understanding of basic math concepts and computations. On top of that, they are risk-takers, work well with others cooperatively and are using higher level thinking skills. They are uninhibited when answering questions and their writing ideas and fluency are highly developed.

In our school the students are actively involved in every aspect of learning—including skill development—in innovative and child-oriented ways. When children leave our school they will be able to think, solve problems, work toward school and learning, have integrity and know the basics. These are skills that are required and desired in the business world.

As we face the information age of the 21st Century, I would hope that we would want schools and teachers to be preparing to meet the challenges—not moving backward.

Would you take your child to a doctor who practiced medicine the same way as he or she did 10 to 20 years ago?

Beth Sexton

Hulsing Elementary School

Suicide alternative offered

To the editor:

Is it true that everyone who faces a life-threatening illness must endure endless pain and suffering? If you've been reading the newspapers or watching television these past two years, you might have come to that conclusion. After all, we are constantly being bombarded by headlines about Dr. Jack Kevorkian and physician-assisted suicide.

I am deeply concerned about the cumulative effect of such media attention on "uncontrollable" pain and the suicide option. The clear message being conveyed is that pain will be unavoidable when a person has a serious or life-threatening illness, such as cancer. This is simply not true. Nearly all pain can be adequately controlled.

One aspect of modern medicine that has received little attention in this country is palliative care, which focuses on making the patient as comfortable as possible through state-of-the-art pain and symptom control. Although palliative care is a medical specialty in Europe and is documented in medical journals here, relatively few professionals in this country actively practice it or know when to make referrals to those people and organizations that do. As a result, individuals who are seriously ill are forced into feelings of inadequacy ("there's nothing more we can do...") and hopelessness.

There are, however, alternatives to Dr. Kevorkian and to pain and suffering. One is Hospice.

Hospice care is not exciting or glamorous and it rarely makes the evening news. But for thousands of patients and their families each year who face a life-threatening illness, it is a viable, 'cost-effective, life-affirming option; an alternative that enables individuals to complete their life with grace, dignity, and comfort.

Misconceptions about Hospice abound - is it a beautiful building in the country of what? Hospice actually refers to a way of caring for people in which the emphasis is on making the individual as comfortable as possible, through palliative techniques, rather than attempting to cure the illness. Most care takes place in the comfort and privacy of one's own home.

Hospice was begun in England by Dame Cissley Sanders in 1967. The concept then came to America in the 1970's. One unique aspect of Hospice care is that it addresses the physical, emotional, social and spiritual needs of both patient and family. By including the family in the care plan, Hospice is able to provide many benefits. For instance, we often see monumental work done by the patient and family to break the bonds of issues that have been around for years.

When pain is adequately controlled, patients can focus their attention on quality of life issues and hope, rather than feelings of despair. In this environment, patients can pass along the wisdom, love and heritage of their life to family members. This process of reminding presents an ideal opportunity for the family to tell the patient how much he or she means to them. In turn, patients know they are valued and that their life has meant something to those who matter most.

A tremendous amount of hearing between patient and family occurs when they are able to talk freely about the approaching death. By addressing issues of grief and loss, the family builds a great deal of inner resources for support during the ensuing grief process. The sense of "closure" that is achieved offers growth and healing for future generations.

But Hospice care doesn't end when the patient dies. Federal law mandates that bereavement programs be made available at no cost to the patient's family following the loss. Recognizing the importance of such programs, we offer an extensive variety of bereavement groups for people of all ages, because people of different ages grieve differently.

Hospice is available to anyone who has a life-threatening illness and consents to palliative care. Hospice is a fully covered benefit of both Medicare and Medicaid here in Michigan. Additionally, many private insurance plans have a hospice benefit. You don't have to be rich to receive care.

There are over 1,400 hospice organizations in the United States. Most are small, not-for-profit, community-based agencies. Families who have received Hospice care usually become ardent supporters after their experience with it. They know that a loved one needn't suffer nor be led to believe that suicide is their only option. In fact, we often hear the same thing from many of our families: "We wish we'd known about your services sooner."

Edison plans $75 million energy conservation program

By CRAIG GARRETT
ANP Staff Writer

Picking apples is how Joseph Welch likes to describe the Detroit Edison home and commercial energy-management practices that have existed since 1903 when the utility was founded.

"We've plucked the low-hanging fruit from day one," said Welch, Detroit Edison director of marketing issues. "Now we're going up the tree for the harder to reach fruit, or other types of demand-side management (DSM/energy conservation or management). The whole electric business is in for some major restructuring over the next five to 10 years."

At first blush it appears Detroit Edison officials are gathering apples by the bushel from a low-hanging money tree after plans for a $75-million energy program were announced recently. The project, if approved by the Michigan Public Service Commission, (MPSC) during current rate review hearings in Lansing (expected to last two years), will "encourage conservation and more efficient use of electricity through energy audits, rebates, special off-peak usage rates, incentives and custom-designed programs," according to information released by Detroit Edison public relations officials.

Within the next five years, Welch added, the utility plans to spend nearly one percent yearly of annual gross revenue (some $3.5 billion in 1991) on DSM programs such as:

- Rebates to home customers for purchasing many large-ticket energy-efficient appliances (refrigerators, air conditioners, insulated water heaters, furnaces, etc.) and low-cost lighting (primarily sodium fixtures and low-watt bulbs).
- Special rates to encourage off-peak electricity use.
- Incentives (cash or rebates) to build energy-efficient homes.

Commercial customers also will be provided rebates on replacement lighting, air conditioning, refrigeration and cool-storage systems, plus conduct energy audits designed to "help customers determine the most cost effective ways to manage energy use," i.e. saving money. The utility also offers substantial commercial discounts by interrupting power, the so-called R-10 rate, during peak-use periods.

"And all at the lowest possible price and without interrupting lifestyles," Welch added.

Some critics suggest, however, that Detroit Edison officials are deliberately wasting more energy and money than a wheezy old furnace promoting the million-dollar-energy program and are dancing lightly around the topic of a total commitment to energy management and thereby cutting electric bills.

"The funding Edison is talking about is grossly inadequate," said Geoffrey Crandall. "Compared to other much more aggressive companies, $75 million is just a fraction of the amount they should be spending and, I would add, almost cynical. It's ridiculous. I don't see any real leadership or concrete programs at Edison and they may be just placating the (Michigan) public service commission because of unusually high profits (reportedly 20 percent) over the last five years."

Crandall is a former MPSC industrial conservation director currently serving as a consultant with MSB Energy Associates, DSM professionals, based in Madison, Wisc. Crandall has testified before a U.S. House committee on science, space and technology and a number of state utility commissions on topics primarily concerning industrial energy management programs from New England to California. He also served as a MPSC witness through Consumers Power rate hearings in 1991 in which the Jackson-based utility was ordered to ante up some $165-million for energy-reduction programs within the next three years in the 61 Michigan counties served by the company.

"Michigan utilities overall are rated at or near the bottom of all 50 states," Crandall added. "But at least Consumers has offered significant change and has switched into a far more aggressive mode in DSM. I'm impressed with their plans."

Ted Flanigan, a director of the Results Center, an Aspen-based organization tracking American utility companies, said the Midwest in general lags behind many conscientious energy producers.

"You really have to go to the coasts," Flanigan said. "The more aggressive companies are setting aside 5 percent (of gross revenues) as a benchmark for good energy-management programs. Typically most Midwest firms are coming in at under one percent, where PG and E (Pacific Gas and Electric in California) and New England (New England Electric System) come in substantially higher, and what's more, call for spending even higher percentages of revenue on major energy reduction programs into the next century. I personally don't think (Detroit) Edison is being a leader."

"We try to get people to think of demand-side, or energy management," Flanigan added, "as the consumer side of the electric meter."

Hard-core cynics go as far as suggesting that Edison management is not concerned whatsoever with energy conservation practices, but rather with creating more demand for electric power, or ramping up, and adding surplus notches to the old bedpost (i.e. dividends-corporate ladder).

James Kaul and Steven Kihm are co-authors of Fuel Switching-Why Should Be Done, Why It Isn't Done and Ways Regulators Can Address It, a document outlining fuel switching practices (from electricity to natural gas) as a DSM option. Both have served as public service commissioners and utility industry analysts. Their studies contend clear evidence is available that shows little impact on investors (a primary Detroit Edison concern) by modifying energy management, cutting coal and nuclear usage and essentially moving into the modern age. Why?

Both men said many utility managers, "do not know that sales growth and investor returns are unrelated. Most managers are engineers by training, (as is Welch) not financial analysts. Instead, many have simply accepted the intuitively-appealing, but incorrect, assumption that sales growth is good for investors. Corporate cultures tend to reinforce this incorrect 'growth is good' philosophy."

"In fact," the Kaul/Kihm report added, "if increases in demand mean that new capacity (i.e. staggering investment with stockholder dividends) has to be added, that very well could be negative signs."

Welch invited Kaul, Kihm and Crandall to check the Detroit Edison record. Hundreds of millions in cost overruns at the Monroe nuclear plant literally forced the utility to reduce growth and talk seriously about implementing energy-management programs.

"We've aggressively reorganized Edison over the last couple of years," Welch said. "We renegotiated fuel contracts and our employee count is down 1,000. We're not forecasting a need for new capacity through the end of the century."

Welch candidly admitted Michigan industry, primarily auto manufacturers, face crucial decisions concerning plant conversions to more energy-efficient machinery, insulation and lighting.

"As straight as I can be," he said, "these people (industry) are being asked to pay the (energy conversion) tab so society benefits. When they close Willow Run nobody listens. Are we going to ask GM to screw in some light bulbs to pay for all this? Sure we need progressive programs and proven alternative sources of energy, but we can't afford to disrupt the financial equilibrium on the backs of these struggling companies. The suggestion that Edison (under the direction of CEO John Lobb) is not staying on the high road is crazy. I invite anyone to sit down and discover that we are square shooters."

Sue Pemberton, a resource specialist with the Michigan United Conservation Clubs in Lansing, said the lack of concrete Detroit Edison energy programs and citizen involvement has left her with the taste of sour green apples.

Curly maintains the magic of the

HARLEM GLOBETROTTERS

His handsome face and famous hairless head have been recognized by children and adults of all ages for more than 29 years.

The unique style and command of the basketball can describe no other player than Curly Neal.

Born Frederic Douglas Neal, this famous Harlem Globetrotter has traveled one million miles to 97 countries and played in more than 6,000 basketball games.

Neal is an expert in dribbling and shooting. He has made special appearances for former presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford as well as Pope Paul, Pope John and Pope Pius.

The 6 foot, 1-inch 175-pound player never shot less than 50 percent from the floor. Although Neal no longer plays with the Harlem Globetrotters, he continues to represent the team as the national spokesperson.

Fame began for Neal when he was growing up in Greensboro, N.C. At age 12 he decided to create his own identity by shaving his head. It was also at this time he started playing basketball.

"Baseball was actually my first love," Neal said. "I started playing basketball late at the age of 12. I say late because kids usually started at 7 or 8 years old. I decided to play basketball because it kept me out of the trouble. I played high school basketball and made All State."

With his achievements at an earlier age, Neal obtained a basketball scholarship to Johnson C. Smith University in Charlotte, N.C. where he received a bachelor of science degree in commercial art and physical education.

"I was drafted by the Harlem Globetrotters my senior year at J.C. Smith amongst 125 other guys from all over the U.S.," Neal said.

It really wasn't Neal's childhood dream to play with the Globetrotters. He just wanted to become a professional athlete.

"My childhood dream was to become a professional athlete whether it was baseball, basketball or football," Neal said. "I play all sports."

Neal was one of five individuals out of 125 candidates chosen to become a Harlem Globetrotter.

"My first trip was around the world," Neal said. "I've been around the world three times. The largest crowd I played before was 75,000 people in Berlin, Germany, and the smallest has been before the pope."

Besides promoting the Globetrotters, Neal is also a spokesperson for the Orlando Magic NBA team. He now resides in Orlando, Fla.

"So now I'm wearing two hats, and I really enjoy it because I love kids and people," Neal said.

The Harlem Globetrotters today do not give the same presentation as they once did from 1963 to 1985, according to Neal.

"We were more then basketball players," Neal said. "We were entertainers, actors. We were on numerous television shows including Merv Griffin, Love Boat, Mike Douglas, White Shadow and ABC Wide World of Sports."

The original Harlem Globetrotters were also involved with two children's cartoon series which included The Harlem Globetrotters Popcorn Machine on Saturday morning.

"I'm hoping in the future the team will get more involved with television," Neal said. "I think what it's going to take is maybe bringing some of the older Globetrotters back and teach the newer Globetrotters some of the ball handling tricks."

"Maybe in the future we can get a reunion game with some of the original players as a fundraising event and send some money to the children's foundations. I like to give something back to the community because these fans have been supporting us for years."

If Neal wasn't involved with basketball, he said he might have pursued an acting career.

"I think I would challenge the entertainment field a bit, and I would also do a lot with kids because I really love children," Neal said.

How did Neal get his famous "Curly" name?

"My coach gave me that name," Neal said. "I don't know if he got it from the Three Stooges."

Neal said he shaved his head when he was 12 years old to go along with the other kids in his neighborhood.

"I see now everybody is shaving their heads," Neal said. "So, I must have done something good."

Neal is a firm believer in attaining a quality education, and he passes this message on to all the children he meets.

"I tell them academics first and athletics second," Neal said. "I have a lovely 15-year-old daughter who just made the honor roll. She wants a car when she turns 16, and I told if she made the honor roll I would help her."

In the future Globetrotter fans may see a book written by Neal which provides inspiration to achieve many things in life.

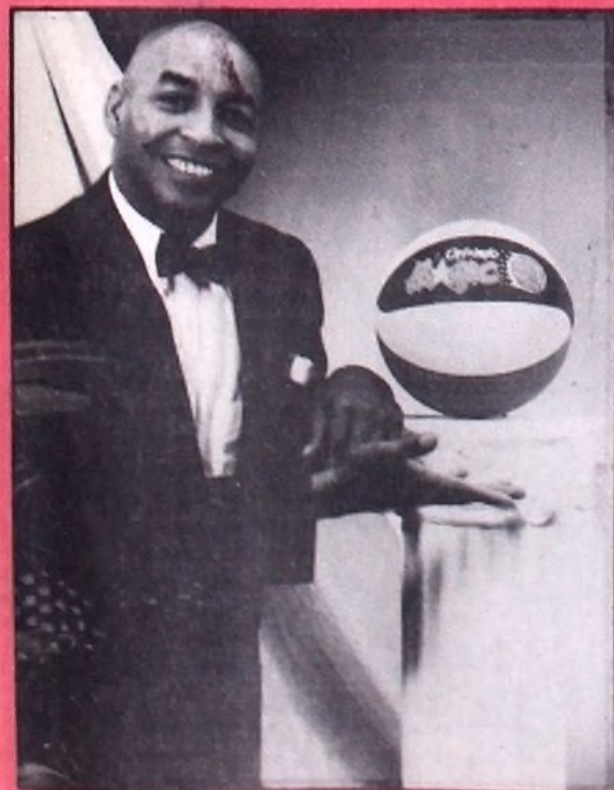

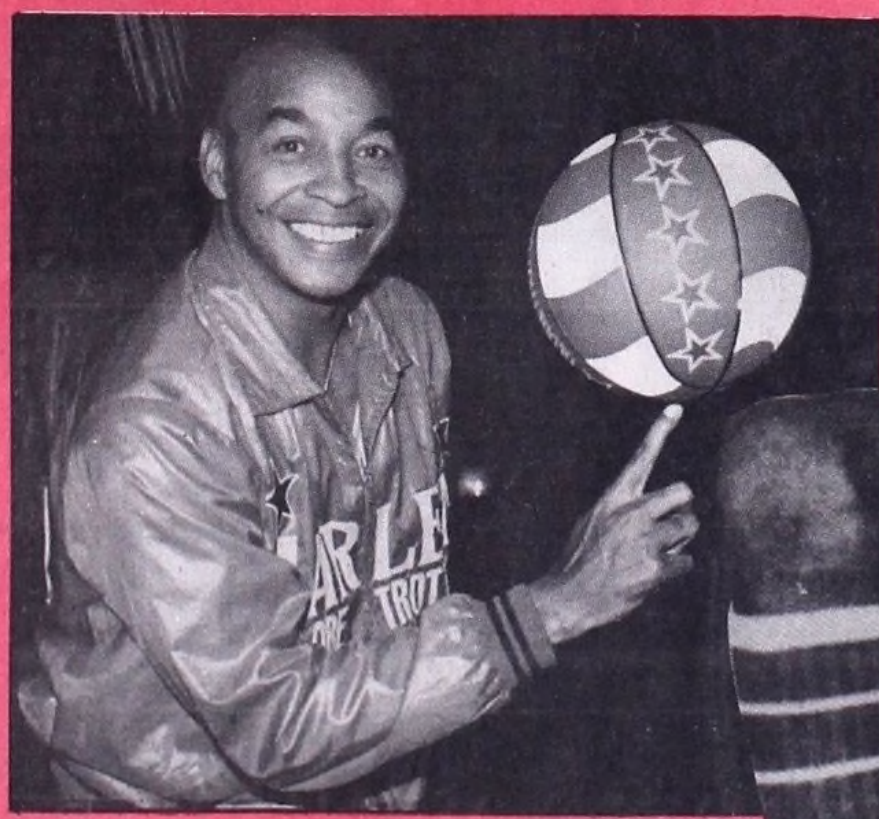

"I'm in the process of putting together a book now," Neal said.

What keeps this talented celebrity going on a day-to-day basis?

"I strive to do nothing but the best," Neal said.

The Harlem Globetrotters will be taking on their arch rivals, The Washington Generals Dec. 27 at the Palace of Auburn Hills and Dec. 28 at the Joe Louis Arena. For ticket information call 396-7600.

Local actors take center stage at area theaters

By MARGO DEWEY
ANP Feature Editor

The path to becoming a professional performer has both ups and downs.

Sometimes the lead role seems unattainable no matter how perfect the aspiring actor is for the part.

But, a number of local western Wayne County area residents have decided to dedicate their lives to pursue a career in acting no matter how many obstacles they must face.

Most recently, Westland resident David Schoen and Romulus resident Amy Armstrong played the lead roles in Postmortem, a mystery thriller by Ken Ludwig at the Adray auditorium of the MacKenzie Fine Arts center.

Both students are attending Henry Ford Community College.

Directed by Dale Van Dorp, the story is set in the 1920s and centers around famous actor-manager William Gillette, known as Sherlock Holmes, in his highly successful stage adaptation of Conan Doyle's original story.

Armstrong graduated from Romulus High School in 1989. She said her love for the stage began when she performed in 42nd Street at the high school.

"There is no better kind of satisfaction you can get than acting before a live audience," Armstrong said.

Armstrong has also performed in the play productions of Children of a Lesser God and Steel Magnolias. She portrayed Louise in Postmortem.

"Louise is a very eccentric Louise in Postmortem."

"Louise is a very eccentric woman in her late 30s," Armstrong said. "She has been away from the stage for years."

Schoen portrays Gillette who invites the cast of his latest revival of the play to his magnificent Rhenish castle for the weekend. The weekend turns to horror when Gillette discovers that one of his guests is trying to murder him.

Schoen graduated in 1987 from Franklin High School in Livonia. He has also performed in Lystrata and Great White Hope.

tive," Schoen said. "I also like the idea that you get an instant reaction. In the future I want to get my degree and get famous."

Wayne resident Anne Podolski had the unique opportunity the first week in December to dance in the magical Christmas concert 'Twas the Night Before Christmas at the MacKenzie Fine Arts Center of Henry Ford Community College.

Under the direction of Diane Mancinelli, the dancers brought to life the classic Christmas poem. The concert featured 10 dance routines including Christmas Stocking Dance, The Best Present, Jazzy Santa and Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree.

This is not the first performance for Podolski. She also has performed in Anything Goes and South Pacific.

"It's great to be on stage," Podolski said. "It's a wonderful means of self expression. I've been involved with the theater for 11 years."

Podolski said she would like to get more involved with choreography.

"I'm trying to learn as much as I can about dance," Podolski said. "I would love to perform in New York one day."

"With acting I like the fact that I can say something positive. I also like the idea that you get an instant reaction. In the future I want to get my degree and get famous."

- David Schoen

Other local residents who have performed on stage at college or at a community theater include Wayne resident Michelle Tackett who performed in Theatre Siena's production of The House of Blue Leaves by John Guare at Siena Heights College in Adrian.

Tackett is a freshman at Siena and portrayed Bananas Shaughnessy in the production.

Wayne resident Jamie England recently starred as Bernice Roth in the production Musical Comedy Murders of 1940 at the Forest Roberts Theatre.

She has a dual major in English/theatre with a minor in speech.

Inkster resident Ivory

McKay portrayed Father O'Reilly in Do Patent Leather Shoes Really Reflect Up? by John R. Powers at the Players Guild of Dearborn.

The show is set in the 1950s where the kids of St. Bastion's experience the more carefree days of youth and the sometimes awkward moments of growing up.

Canton resident Jackie Marns is now portraying the Master Toymaker in Babes in Toyland at the Henry Ford Museum.

The 1903 musical classic is playing now through Jan. 2. Marns sings the ever popular Toyland in the production. For ticket information contact the reservations desk at 271-1620.

Santa's helpers

School shop helps students select perfect gifts

By MARGO DEWEY
ANP Feature Editor

The stores are packed with shoppers. With only seven more shopping days left until Christmas, crowds can sometimes make the holiday season hectic.

The staff at Vandenberg Elementary School, however, has found a way to assist students with buying their parents and friends gifts without any hassles.

A Santa Workshop was created for students last week offering gifts from 10 cents to $5, according to Josephine Hayes, president of the Vandenberg PTA, and Jean Sentz, who serves as vice-president of the group.

"This year we received the merchandise from L and M supply company," Hayes said. "We have a wide variety of gifts that students can afford to buy their mothers and fathers and grandparents."

"We even had a few shoppers who bought gifts for their girlfriends."

Parents assisted with the Santa shop. There were Christmas pins, "I love Grandma" paperweights made of sand, key chains and jewelry.

"We have this every year," Sentz said. "What little profits that are made from the shop, we put back into the PTA fund. This is something the children enjoy because they really like to shop on their own to surprise their parents."

Sixth grader Chad Jolly carefully inspected all of the goodies. Jolly said he knows what he wants from Santa Claus this year.

"I think I would like a pair of rollerblades this Christmas," Jolly said.

Fourth grader Sonia Boley wanted to know if Santa really does exist.

"Will he really bring what you ask for?" Boley said. "If he does, I would like a pair of rollerblades, too."

Patrice Hearst, a fourth grader, took a bit more time with deciding on what she would like this season.

"I'm not really sure what I want, but if I could have one thing it would probably be a Barbi doll," Hearst said.

The Santa shop closed last Friday after all the students had a chance to find that perfect gift.

Sonia Boley finds it difficult to choose among the many offerings at the workshop, although her selection seems to please her fellow shoppers.

Larry DiVizio

Brandon Russell takes his time and carefully evaluates all the offerings at the Santa's Workshop prior to selecting just the right gift to suit his fourth-grade budget.

Fourth grade student Patrice Hearst finds the perfect gift for her mother at the workshop, but it is a secret.

Communities unite in opposition to new waste disposal plan

By JOAN DYER-ZINNER
Belleville City Editor

Concern about a proposed hazardous waste facility in nearby Washtenaw County has prompted officials in Belleville, Van Buren Township and Sumpter Township to adopt resolutions opposing the siting.

Envotech Inc. has proposed to build a landfill, incinerator and injection well at a 400-acre site in Augusta Township. The property is located 10 miles south of Ypsilanti and six miles southwest of Willis, directly adjacent to the Milan Federal Penitentiary.

The latest resolution was adopted by Belleville last week.

"I've heard about their plans for injection wells, and they are scary," said Belleville Mayor Glenn Silvenis. "There's been a lot of positive publicity about the project, but I don't think we should be fooled by it."

Belleville Councilman Anthony Talaga said he is concerned about trucks transporting hazardous materials along local roads if the project is approved.

David Jacques, supervisor of Van Buren Township, also expressed concern about the injection wells would place the hazardous materials far below the land surface, and possibly affect the natural ground water supply.

Van Buren Township Environmental Manager Ray Striz opposes the facility because of the possibility of airborne particulates escaping from the incinerator.

Envotech is seeking to construct the hazardous waste complex on a 400-acre parcel, which is part of 1,600 acres of land in Augusta Township owned by the firm.

The proposed landfill site has been mapped as a "fragile lands area" unsuitable for any type of materials by the Hazardous Waste Disposal Subcommittee of the Washtenaw Board of Commissioners. The Environmental Protection Agency and Washtenaw County have voice disapproval of the land disposal of toxic wastes.

Every body looking forward to new morgue

By CRAIG GARRETT
ANP Staff Writer

Cold and nearly frozen stiff, several officials shoveled dirt Wednesday for ground breaking ceremonies at the new Wayne County medical examiner's office.

No one, of course, is more relieved than the man running the 40-member department.

"We are working in a small, filthy building in total disrepair," Dr. Bader Cassin said Friday. "So yes, we're delighted to be recognized and get the facilities we so desperately need."

The medical examiner's office services all of Wayne County, where approximately 20,000 people died last year. The old county morgue at Brush and Lafayette was built in 1924.

Cassin, the chief county medical examiner since 1988 and a 20-year pathology veteran, said the new $14.5-million-medical building, located near the Wayne State University campus off Warren Avenue, will house 47,000-square-feet of modern office and laboratory equipment to aid six physicians in performing some 3,500 autopsies each year, or about 450 each. Only deaths of suspicious, violent or unnatural causes are investigated and the decision to conduct an autopsy rests with the doctor.

Medical examiners also inspect death scenes, interview parents of deceased children, talk with doctors concerning a victim's "last hours" and testify in court, often in homicide cases. Wayne County, Cassin added, remains one of the busiest morgues in the country.

"Our job is to accurately certify a death and the manner in which that person died," Cassin said. "That's tough work in Detroit."

Also transferred to the new site in 1995 will be department "artifacts" collected over the years, including a variety of murder weapons.

Disaster victims aided

Victims of Hurricane Andrew and Iniki are benefiting from more than $1.5 million collected by McDonald's restaurants and its customers.

In all, McDonald's, an 8,800-restaurant chain in the U.S., collected more than $1.5 million, including a $200,000 grant from Ronald McDonald Children's Charities. The total collected was the largest nationwide grassroots donation to date to assist the victims of the two hurricanes and other disasters, according to the American Red Cross.

Christmas services planned

Special Christmas Eve services are planned at Trinity Episcopal Church.

At 5 p.m., there will be a Festival Eucharist with brass. The Junior Choir will sing and child care will be provided. The service will be oriented toward children. At 10:30 p.m., the Senior Choir will present a concert of contemporary and traditional Christmas carols with soloists and instrumentalists.

At 11 p.m., there will be a Festival Eucharist with brass, candles and incense.

Between 5 and 11 p.m., the Parish Hall will be open for refreshments and fellowship.

American made

Exhibit highlights industrial progress

By JOAN DYER-ZINNER
Belleville City Editor

Hands-on activities, video and film presentation plus cartoons highlight the 50,000-square-foot "Made in America" exhibit at the Henry Ford Museum.

Replacing the neat rows of exhibits that once filled the museum, the new multi-media presentation adds excitement - and even fun - to the exploration of social and technological roots of the manufacturing heritage of the nation.

"Made in American" will offer access to the most compelling landmarks, people and ideas in American industry from the 1700s to the present," said museum president Harold K. Skamstad Jr. "Although manufacturing has created much of the economic value that sustains American democracy, Americans today have little direct experience with industry."

Running overhead is a conveyor which carries a continuous parade of American-made products from a shopping cart to an airplane propeller.

The newly opened exhibit, featuring a collection of industrial artifacts and state-of-the-art exhibition techniques, will link visitors with current issues such as quality and competitiveness as it tells the story of American industry.

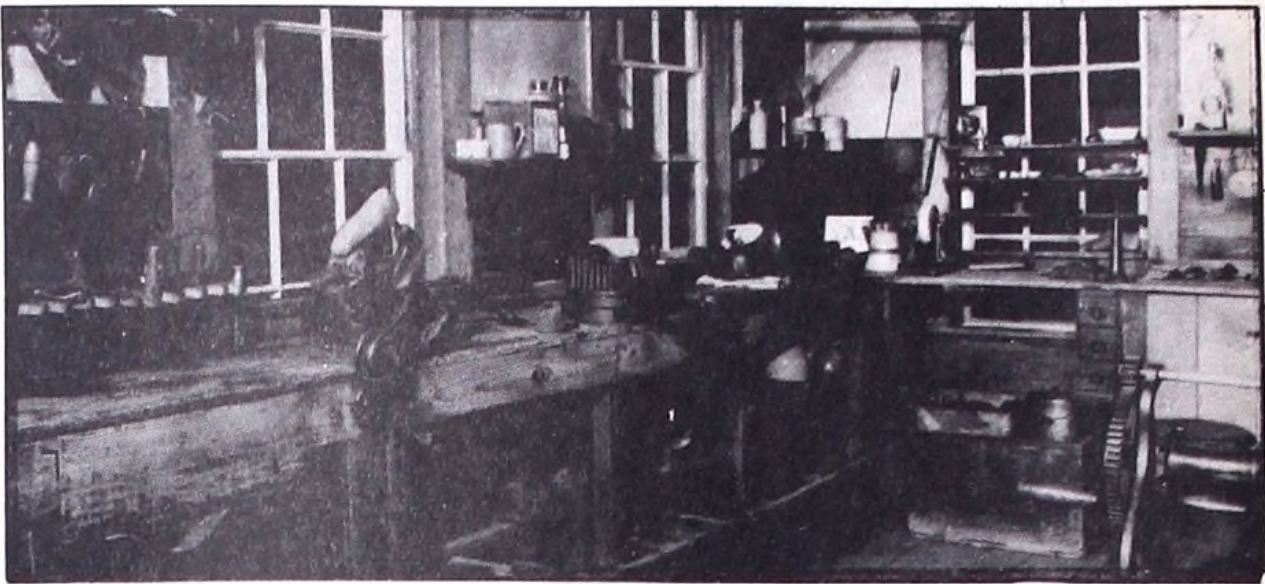

Youngsters will find the atmosphere of the exhibit to be "user-friendly." They will especially appreciate the display labels which use cartoon characters to explain the workings of the machinery.

Situated in a football-field sized area, "Made in America" is larger than most history museums in the U.S. As visitors walk through the museum, they will trace industrial development from hand crafts to contemporary robotics and computerized control systems.

Among the key displays and exhibits in the three sections - Making Things, Making Power and Making Choices - are:

- An automatic assembly system which illustrates the precision of contemporary technology, operating as if it were putting together 1,500 electrical switches per hour.
- A massive light-bulb machine with an accompanying video.
- Fiber-optic cable aglow with simulated current links

three 27-foot electrical transmission towers.

- A hydroelectric generator featuring a cut-away section into which visitors can enter.
- Touch-screen computer which lets visitors feel what it is like to operate an electrical power plant.

The exhibit also features a 1750 Newcomen steam engine - the oldest intact steam engine in the world - and a 1890 shoe shop.

Support for the $6 million "Made in American" exhibit was provided by donations from corporations, individuals, foundations and grants.

Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village are located at Oakwood Boulevard and Village Road in Dearborn, just west of the Southfield Freeway and south of Michigan Avenue

Party time

City, merchants help children celebrate season

Nearly 100 Westland children were treated to a Christmas party last week by employees from the Westland Community Development Department.

The children ranged in ages from 5 to 12 years old.

The best part of the party came when a special guest arrived. The children visited with Santa Claus, ate pizza, played games and received a gift.

"The idea of the a holiday bash for children was originally conceived back in 1988 by city employees at the Dorsey Community Center and the newly-opened Westland Target Store on Warren Road," said Jay Gilbert, Westland director of housing and community development. "Now in its fifth year the Christmas party has grown so much in size that additional sponsors were required to ensure that each child had something to eat and a toy to take home."

Other organizations that participated this year included, the Westland Rotary Club and the Westland Chamber of Commerce.

Gilbert thanked all of the community groups that participated and helped make the party a reality.

Gilbert gave special thanks to Jack Heidenreich, a Wayne County employee for playing Santa Claus.

"I have to admire Jack," Gilbert said. "Most people would be intimidated facing a roomful of 100-plus excited children who each want a personal greeting from Santa. But Jack did an excellent job listening to each child's Christmas wish and making them feel special."

Next year, Gilbert hopes to expand the party and reach more needy children.

Discovery of reading dysfunction may save students

By CRAIG GARRETT
ANP Staff Writer

For 15 years Scott Larson repeatedly told teachers, school aides and his parents that reading made him physically ill and tired. He often fell asleep at his desk and suffered severe headaches. His grades faltered and eventually he stopped believing in himself, quit high school and nearly ruined his life. Still, no one listened.

"You start out with a list of problems," Scott's father, Steve, said recently, "like 'you don't work hard enough,' or 'you're lazy and not motivated.' Pretty soon it looks like the problem is with your child when you reach the bottom of the excuse list. Maybe you have a bad kid. The tragedy was that Scott was telling the truth."

What the Larsons discovered three years ago shocked the family; Scott, now 18, was afflicted with Scotopic Sensitivity Syndrome (SSS), a neurological dysfunction causing written words to literally move and swim on the page, blur, or washout like a cheap typewriter using wet paper. Basic reading turns into an extreme effort, like it did for Scott until he found help.

"I still kick myself for not listening to my son," Larson, a

Ford Motor Co. executive and former Canton Township board trustee, said. "He'll never be the same as some other kids, he still doesn't like to read, but he's done exceptionally well catching up and I'm very proud of where he's at."

Helen Irlen, head of the adult learning disability program at California State University when she identified SSS in 1981, said the discovery was almost accidental during a federal project to learn why certain adults continue to have reading difficulties past high school.

"We learned there was an undiscovered type of reading problem," Irlen said during a recent telephone interview from her California office. "Many of the adults we studied reported that it was physically painful to read. We knew that many children complained of similar problems, but we've dismissed those complaints because they were kids. Now adults were telling us the same thing. It was fascinating."

What Irlen learned was that many readers in the study group skipped lines or words, constantly reread sentences and took short breaks after only a few minutes reading. Questioning the readers Irlen learned some startling facts.

"They told us words were pulsating on the page or moved, or vibrated. Rather than telling them they had a reading problem, like we do with children, for once we listened."

- Helen Irlen

"They told us words were pulsating on the page, or moved, or vibrated," she said. "Rather than telling them they had a reading problem, like we do with children, for once we listened."

Several members of the California study group, Irlen said, were further tested by doctors and treated with medication, but to no avail. In 1983, exploring the theory of a dominant eye causing the dysfunction, Irlen used colored plastic overlay sheets to test a 35-year-old woman involved in the study.

"The second I laid the (plastic) sheet down," Irlen said, "the page stopped moving. It was dramatic. A problem so severe, that caused people to give up complete parts of their lives, was changed forever with something as simple as color. It was a powerful, potent experience."

Scott Larson, it was learned, was diagnosed with a severe form of SSS. When he looked at the page of book he could focus on two or three words and everything around the words swirled like a hurricane around the eye. In order to complete a sentence he moved his eyes along, using his finger, one word at a time. In was no wonder Scott tired after just a few minutes reading. But the tension at home and school had taken a toll on an otherwise bright boy, his father said.

"The day I brought Scott home from testing," Steve Larson said, "and we learned that he is severely scotopic, my wife asked how the testing went. Scott held a sheet of paper in front of her face and, moving the paper up and down, said something like 'everything went great, mom,' and he walked out of the room."

Steve Larson today is one of only a handful in Michigan trained to test for SSS. He suggests parents check their children for squinting, eye rubbing, unusual headaches, rereading and a variety of other reading habits not considered normal.

Irlen suggests that some 46 percent of school children suffer from SSS and roughly 12 percent of the general adult population.

"School districts are picking up slowly on the training," she said. "We're still getting some mixed reactions. It sounds too easy to lay a sheet of red paper (or any color—each SSS person varies) down. But the color is simply a filter to the brain and not some miracle cure."

Irlen added that SSS is proving to run in families and future research showing how the brain actually works is the next step in her studies.

Steve Larson also said certain lighting is seen as playing a role in the reading dysfunction.

"If there's one thing I've learned," Larson said, "don't always assume people see things the way you do."

Motor City Liquidators have established a sweater liquidation center at 25125 Ford Road in Dearborn. A wide variety of designer sweaters can be purchased for $3, $5 or $8, according to Patrick J. Marlowe, spokesperson for Motor City. "We have 100,000 sweaters available for customers," Marlowe said. "We have all sizes for children, men and women. The $3 sweaters retail between $30 and $40, the $5 sweaters retail between $50 and $70, and the $8 sweaters retail between $80 to $100."

The sweaters are displayed on racks throughout the 10,000-square-foot building. The clothing comes from major department stores including Saks Fifth Avenue, according to Marlowe.

"We have Liz Claiborne clothes, Ralph Lauren, LL Bean," Marlowe said. "Many of the clothes are from the garment district in New York. We travel throughout the U.S. to find the designer styles that everyone will like."

Although some of the sweaters have slight defects, and they are priced accordingly, the majority are in very good condition.

"If you're willing to take the time to look through the racks, we have excellent merchandise at rock-bottom prices," Marlowe said.

Besides sweaters, the liquidation center also has various little items including photo albums.

"We have gift boxes for all our sweaters for the holidays," Marlowe said. "If you have the patience, and you're looking for a bargain, this is the place to go."

The establishment is open 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day. The liquidation center is expected to only be open until February.

"We're also going to be expanding into other merchandise," Marlowe said. "We're planning on opening a trade center and flea market behind this building. We would like to open both the trade center and flea market Jan. 1."

Booth space is now available. Marlowe said he expects more than 150 exhibitors will be selling various antiques and crafts once the doors open.

Individuals interested in setting up a booth can call 565-3569.

When my routine pregnancy suddenly wasn't...

I was glad I'd chosen Hutzel. From the beginning, my pregnancy was described as "normal." So when I wanted a private room—one where labor, delivery, and recovery could all take place—my doctor had no objections. But if something went wrong,

I wanted to know my baby and I would also have the most knowledgeable specialists and the latest medical technology nearby. So I chose The Detroit Medical Center's Hutzel Hospital.

To my surprise, Hutzel's private LDRP (Labor, Delivery, Recovery, Post-Partum) rooms were among the most spacious and beautiful I'd seen. I was glad I could be in one—and that I'd chosen Hutzel. Because at the last minute, my baby developed complications and a team of Hutzel specialists was right there to provide the care we both needed.

Like a lot of other women, I've learned there's no such thing as a "routine" pregnancy. Thank goodness there's Hutzel Hospital.

LOOK FOR "SAFE" TOYS THIS CHRISTMAS

by Roderico Luttmann, M.D.

Kids + Christmas = Toys! But those plush, plastic, battery-operated joys can sometimes be dangerous. Follow these safety tips when buying toys for your little ones this Christmas.

- Buy for your child's age. When purchasing toys for children, the most important thing to remember is to buy toys appropriate for your child's age. Toys that are perfectly safe for an older child can be dangerous in the hands of an infant or toddler.
- Ask questions. Don't hesitate to ask questions when buying toys for your kids. If a toy is wrapped or boxed, and you have a concern, ask the store manager if you can examine the toy.
- Read labels carefully. Toys designed for older kids, and not meant to be placed in the mouth, may pose serious threats to infants and toddlers. Many plastics contain chemicals that are dangerous if ingested.

- Avoid balloons. Balloons, popular with kids of all ages, are one of the biggest causes of injury and death to young kids. Very attractive to infants and toddlers, balloons can be inhaled and lodge in the windpipe, causing choking.
- Be wary of battery-operated toys. Batteries can be very dangerous, even lethal, if ingested. Even older children should be supervised when playing with battery-powered toys.

Challenge, but don't frustrate Also, aside from safety concerns, toys should match your child's developmental age. You want to challenge your children, but you don't want to frustrate them. Even if you think your 3 year old is a genius, don't buy him or her a computer toy if they're not ready for it. And a 2 year old doesn't have the motor skills to play with toys made for older kids. It can do more harm than good.

The last campaign

Title-contenders Wayne, Belleville set showdown course

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Two games into the 1992-93 high school basketball season, and it already appears that the course for the final Wolverine "A" Conference campaign has been set.

Undefeated and defending champ Wayne Memorial, with two stunning victories behind them, and Belleville, also winner of its two first starts, are again heading for a showdown for the conference title.

The two have either won or tied for the conference title eight of the past 10 years. And the 1992-93 campaign with be the last one: the league is scheduled to join the Mega Conference after the current school year.

Also, look for Dearborn Fordson to flex its cage muscles this year, according to Wayne coach Chuck Henry.

"Fordson, despite one loss, has an excellent team this year and is a power to be reckoned with," warned the veteran coach. "And Belleville again looks like the one to beat."

After jolting a taller Plymouth Canton, Read related story on this page Wayne pulled out a 68-64 victory over Catholic League giant, Redford Catholic Central, Friday night.

Ignited by a 12-1 run, fed by Rod Hardison's eight and Antonio Dodd's six points in the fourth quarter, the Zebras managed to pull out what Henry labeled as "a good win for

I felt that our quickness got to them. I think that, and our defense, has been the key so far. As long as our kids concentrate and play defense as they have in these first two games, we will remain competitive.
Ed Marman

us."

Catholic Central set the early scoring pace as 6-5 center Bryan Paluk led the visitors to an 18-14 first-period advantage. However, Wayne outscored their non-conference rivals, 15-12, and that enabled them to walk into the locker room trailing only by one-point (30-29).

Wayne turned that around in the third period and it held a 48-47 lead as the final quarter began. That 12-1 scoring spree turned the inevitable around, according to the Wayne coach.

"They had us size-wise," Henry noted. "I felt that our quickness got to them. I think that, and our defense, has been the key so far. As long as our kids concentrate and play defense as they have in these first two games, we will remain competitive. We don't have size, but we do have some excellent and hard-working athletes."

Dodd finished the game with 20 points, while Hardison added 17.

Wayne was horrendous at the free throw line, making 16 of 32 opportunities. RCC had a 12 of 25 free throw night.

After playing Garden City (1-1) Tuesday night, Wayne will begin the defense of its conference title tonight. They will meet Trenton on the home court. Trenton has lost its first two games.

In the meantime, Belleville made it 2-0 on the year with a relatively easy victory over Trenton.

Senior guard Doug Walters tossed in 13 points to lead coach Mike Garland's Tigers to a 51-34 victory over the Trojans.

Belleville had a tough assignment Tuesday night, hosting one of the top teams in the state in Detroit Pershing. They will play Wyandotte tonight for their second conference test. The Bruins are coming off of a 45-42 win over Lincoln Park.

The Tigers also will be busy during the holidays. They are scheduled to play Dec. 28-29 in the Benton Harbor Invitational.

New home sweet for Eagles

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Romulus returned home from a road trip to Adrian to play the first basketball game Friday night in a new multi-million dollar athletic complex, and coach Chris Molloy's Eagles didn't disappoint a partisan home crowd.

In fact, if the rest of the season goes the way it did Friday night, you won't hear Molloy or the Eagles complaining.

Jumping out in front 13-9 in the first period against a highly-touted Willow Run, Romulus never looked back. The Eagles built up a 30-point lead before coasting to an easy 68-44 victory over visiting Flyers.

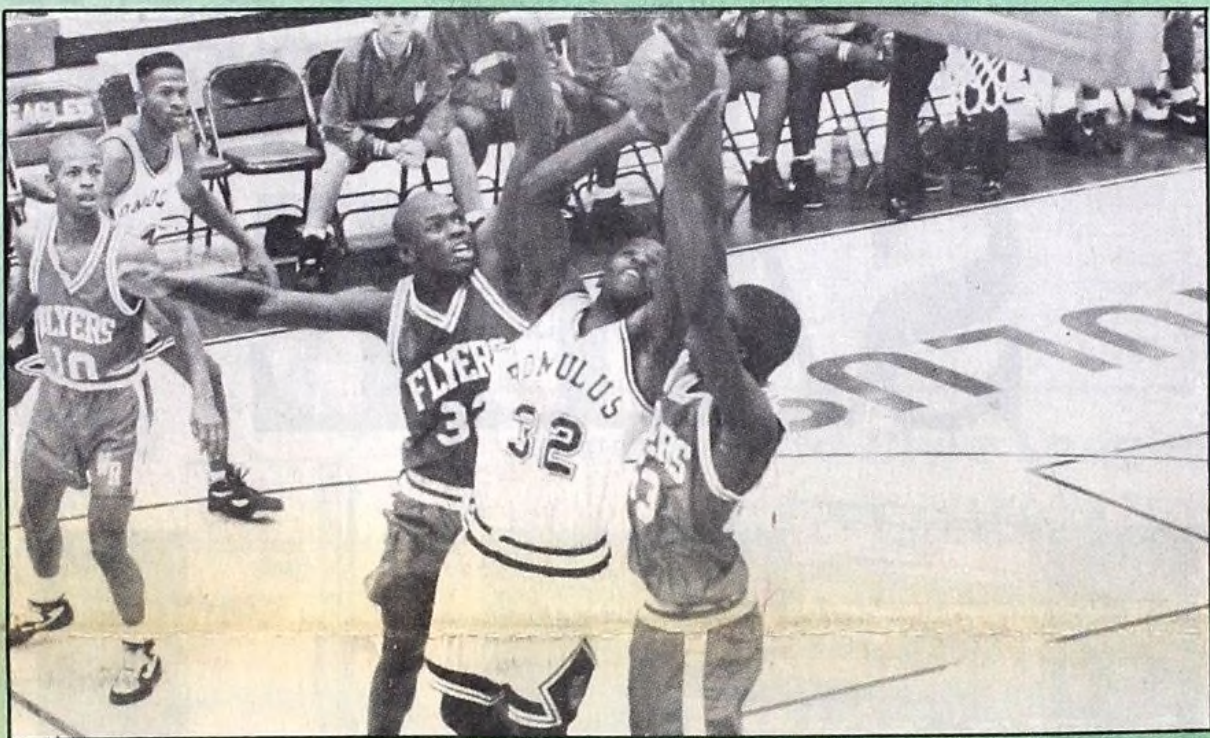

Molloy said he was pleased with the performance, especially the defense.

"I was very happy at the way our kids played defense," said Molloy, who began his fourth year as head coach with a cadre of experienced seniors. "Most of these kids have been in the program together for the past four years, and it's all coming together."

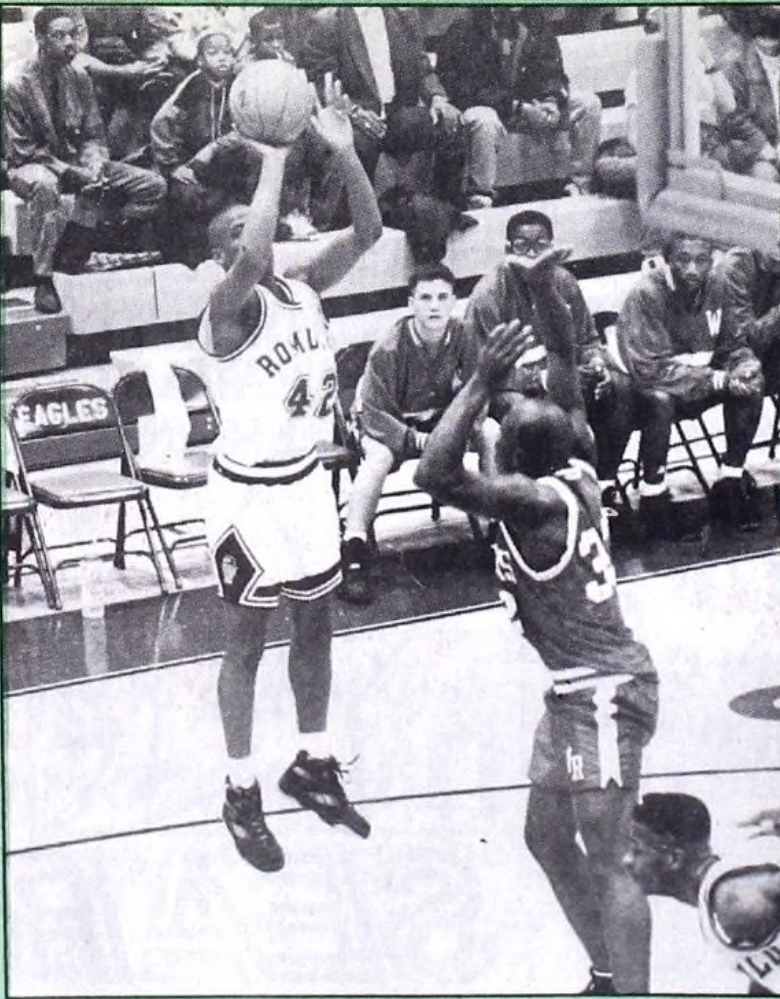

Molloy also noted that, "Playing in the new facility has helped these kids."

"It's a beautiful facility...a beautiful gift from the taxpayers of the school district."

Led by guard Daniel Winston, who had a game-high 14 points, the Eagles put the visitors away early. The hosts had a 32-15 lead at halftime and came back in the third period and outscored the Flyers 18-9. With a 33-point cushion, Molloy also had an opportunity to

Setbacks prove Vikings miss biggest man

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Coach Spencer Grant knows that help is on the way. But, will it arrive in time to help the Inkster High School cage coach salvage the season?

"We hope so," said Grant, after the Vikings lost back-to-back games to Detroit Mumford and Flint Beecher last week. "We need some help on those boards. We need our big man in there to fill the void."

Grant was referring to 6-6, 225-pound sophomore Albert White who is ineligible to play for the Vikings until after the second semester. White, who played his freshman year at Inkster, decided to transfer to Bishop Borgess. And, after enrolling at the Redford Township high school - he attended one class - school officials said, White decided to return to his roots.

However, Michigan High School Athletic Association has ruled against an Inkster High School petition to declare White eligible.

"Because of the transfer, he (White) will have to sit out the first semester," Grant said. "He will be eligible to play in January."

Without White in the line up, the Vikings apparently lack the board and scoring strength to win, at least in their first two games.

Anyway, Inkster was hard-pressed to stop a taller and more physical Mumford which bolted from a 21-15 lead in the first period to a 45-26 advantage at half time and went on to win the season opener, 94-75.

Detroit got 22 points from 6-8 1/2 center Jamel Turner, who was unstoppable after Inkster 6-4 senior James Outlaw was forced to the sidelines with three personal fouls.

Greg Prewitt scored 21 points, and Outlaw, a sophomore, added 16 for the Vikings.

Inkster also fell to Flint Beecher before the home crowd Friday night, 53-47, for their second loss.

Although the Vikings had an early 14-8 first-period lead, a rash of Viking turnovers helped the visitors come back in the low-scoring affair. Flint led 19-18 at the midway point, increased its advantage 34-30 for three-quarters, then hung on for the win.

The Vikings were horrendous at the free throw line where they capitalized on only seven of 23 chances for the evening.

"That was the difference in this ball game," said Grant, who sends his troops up against pre-season title favorite, Oak Park, Friday night. "We had a bunch of turnovers and also couldn't make our free throws. You won't win many ball games when that happens."

Richard Cooper, who scored 13 points and played a superb game on defense, led the Vikings. Foul-prone Outlaw managed to haul down 16 rebounds.

"This will be a big week for us. We have East Catholic on Tuesday, and they're one of the, if not the, best, Class D team in the state this year."

Salem looks good in 1st 2 starts

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Two impressive victories over perennial basketball powers have forced area coaches to take a closer look at Plymouth Salem.

Salem came out of the gate last Tuesday and humbled Wolverine "A" Conference power Monroe, 68-62, then gave Oakland County's finest, Southfield High, a 77-55 whipping on Friday.

"I'm pleased, especially with the overall play at both ends of the court against Southfield," said Salem coach Bob Brodie. "We cut down some of the mistakes we made in the opener and anytime you can beat a Southfield team the way we did, you have to be pleased."

A balanced Salem attack provided by junior James

Head and the Slone twins - Brandon and Michael - gave the Rocks their ramming rod against the Blue Jays, who fell behind by as much as 20 points in the second half.

It was close for one period - the first - when Salem had a 16-15 edge. Then, Head pumped in seven of his game high 19 points to help the Rocks pull away for good.

At the midway point, Salem was up by 11 (38-27) and maintained pressure the rest of the way.

If there were any criticism of the Rocks, it came from their performance at the free throw line where they capitalized on 17 of 27 charities. The Jays canned eight of 12.

Joining Head in the double-figure scoring column were Brandon Slone, who tossed in 18 points and brother Mike, who added 16.

Southfield's top scorer was Terry Lowe who walked off the hardwood with 16.

Canton turns to long-range guns after opening-day loss

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

After a "typical opening game" that ended in a loss to Wayne, Plymouth-Canton cagers roared back and had a not-so-typical and record-shattering performance against Monroe.

Coach Dave Van Wagoner's Chiefs lost their 1992-1993 cage debut to a pressing Wayne Memorial, 69-58, last Tuesday then bounced back behind Brad Paskiewitch's record-setting, long-range shooting to whip Monroe 75-56 before the home crowd.

Paskiewitch connected on six three-pointers, establishing a Canton record in that category. He finished with 22 points in helping the Chiefs win their first of the season.

However, he didn't walk off with high-scoring honors. That distinction went to Paskiewitch's teammate Matt Paupore who scored a career high 28 points, including four treys. Paupore and Paskiewitch came out shooting and when the smoke cleared in the first period, the Chiefs had a 23-15 lead which they never relinquished.

"It was nice to bounce back and win after playing a typical opening day game with Wayne," said VanWagoner. "We played the 'Big D', something we didn't do in the opener. We cut down on our mistakes. I'm satisfied."

With Paupore and Paskiewitch finding the range from almost every spot on the floor, Canton never surrendered the lead to their visitors who kept the game interesting until the final period when they were outscored by the host 23-13.

Brad Whittle, who had 13 points, also scored in double figures for the Chiefs who made nine of 15 from the free throw line.

Monroe received double figures from Gotherell Johnson, who finished with the Trojans' high of 24.

It went down to the wire with Wayne, which got a three-point play from Rod Hardison in the closing seconds that sealed the Canton fate.

Wayne led 15-10 after the first period while the two teams each put 19 points on the scoreboard in the second period. With the Zebras holding on to their precarious lead down the stretch and continuing to put pressure on their hosts with a tough-to-break full-court press, Canton trailed by seven (47-40) when the final stanza began.

Ypsi spoils Glenn coach Schuette's debut

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Marlos Long and Ypsilanti High School spoiled Mike Schuette's debut Friday night as Westland John Glenn head basketball coach.

The Braves, behind Marlos Long's phenomenal three-point shooting, turned back Glenn, 71-60, in the Rockets' season opener.

"I felt we played a strong first game," said Schuette, who replaced Pat Bennett as the head coach. "We came within three of tying the game late in the game, but ran out of gas. Even though it's a loss, I felt that we have sent a message that we can play with anyone."

Long, a 6-foot point-guard, drilled five three-pointers and scored a game-high 33 points in leading the visitors.

"We just couldn't stop him (Long), said Schuette. "He had an exceptional game."

Ypsi grabbed a 19-15 first-period lead, but the Westlanders came back with six unanswered baskets in the next frame as 6-4 junior Tony Gouins and John Miller sparred the surge. Before the half ended, Glenn was in control, 35-30. Their lead was short-lived, however.

Again, it was Long who proved to be Glenn's nemesis. The sharpshooting guard came up with a couple of key baskets to rally the Braves. Before the period ended, Ypsi erased the deficit and carried a 51-45 advantage into the fourth period.

The two teams continued to exchange baskets until Aaron

Scheffer stole a Ypsi pass and fed to Gouins who slammed it into the net. Then, Glenn player Ken Taylor came up with a big steal and scored, making it a three-point game.

However, the Braves responded with a three-point play, putting the game out of reach.

Gouins scored 19 points for the Rockets, who made nine of 16 charities. Miller added 13 while sophomore Brent Washington counted 14 points. Taylor also finished with 14 rebounds.

Ypsi put two other players in double figures. Ahmed Durham and Chaz Robinson each had 10.

Glenn was scheduled to play Tuesday night against Wyandotte Roosevelt, the final game for the team in 1992. The Rockets will have an opportunity to work out the kinks during the holidays and will return to the hardwood on Jan. 5 when they will host Ann Arbor Huron for their first game of 1993.

Westland skater is 'player of tomorrow'

A 15-year-old Westland athlete has been selected as the "Player of Tomorrow" for her accomplishments on the ice.

Amanda Samkowiak has been chosen for the unique honor by Little Caesars Pizza and WKBD-Fox 50, a prolific sponsor of ice hockey and skating teams.

Corporate officials say the award is given to amateur hockey players under the age of 18 who have demonstrated a strong commitment to excellence in both academics and hockey.

Samkowiak began playing hockey at the age of six for the Way Might Team. She is currently attending Westland John Glenn High School, where she earns a 3.5 grade point average. She competes as a center for the Little Caesars/Team Michigan girls Midget AA hockey team.

Amanda has scored eight goals and recorded 11 assists this season.

Her future plans include playing hockey at Eastern Michigan University where she plans to study physical therapy in hopes of one day working for the Detroit Red Wings.

Oldtimers to swim at Wayne

Some of the finest young swimmers in the area will take on former greats in an "Oldtimers Swim Duel," organized by the Wayne Memorial swimming and diving coaching staff and the Wayne Swim Boosters Club.

The competition pitting the old against the new will begin at 7 p.m. Dec. 30 and will be staged at the Wayne Memorial High School swimming pool. There is no admission charge.

Among those who will take to the waters are former All-Area swimmers Randy Lively and Randy Ferguson. Ferguson presently serves as the Wayne women's swim team coach.

Also competing for the Oldtimers will be Richard Phiffer and Andy Sabakegi.

All-Area swim team coming up

The votes are in and the lineup for the 1992 Associated Newspapers All-Area Women's Swimming & Diving Team has been finalized.

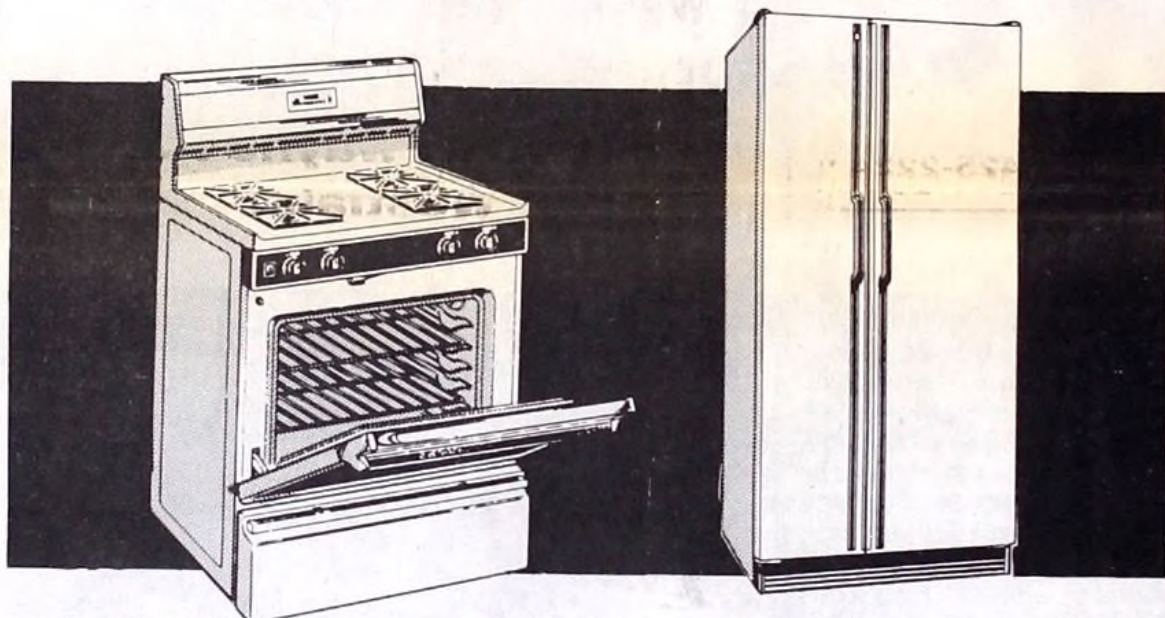

Selected from the cream of the crop of local prep swimmers by local coaches, the ANP All-Area team is dominated this year by swimmers from Plymouth-Canton and Plymouth-Salem High Schools.

Also represented on the 1992 team are swimmers from Wayne, Westland John Glenn and Belleville.

For a fitting tribute to some of Michigan's finest young swimmers, don't miss next week's edition of The Associated Newspapers.

Cheering up

Romulus High cheerleaders have something to cheer about this season. Not only have the Eagles gotten off to their best start in basketball in recent years, but the taxpayers have given the students and the school district an early Christmas gift - a multi-million dollar athletic facility. full-court press their visitors backfired as the Eagles broke the press, and that led to three easy layups for Rog Williams who scored six of the first nine points for his team.

With an 18-9 advantage after the first period, the Eagles got in trouble when Adrian came back, 27-24, at halftime. Although they never gave up the lead, Romulus remained in the dogfight to the end. The Eagles enjoyed a 47-39 edge after three, but Adrian refused to quit and when the Eagles missed the front-end of four one-and-ones, they closed the gap to three.

"We had a 10-point lead with 1 1/2 minutes left in this game," said Molloy. "Missing those one-and-ones placed us in a vulnerable position."

Tyzedd Bowles, a 6-2 Romulus forward, finished the evening with a game-high 19 points and teammate Williams accounted for 17 points (he was eight for eight at the foul line) and also had nine rebounds.

The Eagles also received a superb effort from tri-captain Jeff Smith, who was a standout on defense and also had a hand in running the offense. Lajaun Wilson came off the bench and contributed eight points.

The Eagles were back in action Tuesday night at Bishop Borgess. They are scheduled to host their holiday tournament on Saturday. Six teams will compete for the 1992 invitational title.

200,000 snowmobiles to converge on state trails

Nearly 210,000 registered snowmobiles will hit Michigan trails this winter, making it critical that safety goes along for the ride.

Snowmobiling is one of the most popular winter activities in Michigan, which has more than 5,000 trails, according to Jerry Basch, AAA Michigan community safety services manager.

"However, during the last five snowmobile seasons, Michigan has also recorded a yearly average of 365 crashes, nine deaths and 280 injuries," Basch said. "To improve this safety record, snowmobilers must know the 'rules of the road.'"

Operating a snowmobile after drinking alcohol and driving at reckless speeds are two of the most dangerous practices for a snowmobiler, according to Basch.

Safety tips for a safer snowmobile season include;

- Always wear a helmet.
 - Don't snowmobile alone in frigid weather or in wilderness areas.
 - Carry a first-aid kit, compass, map, matches, an aluminum foil type blanket, snacks, tool kit, rope and extra ignition key.
 - Dress in warm clothing, secured so that it won't tangle in equipment.
 - Stay on marked trails or, where allowed, on the right shoulder of the road. Be alert for fences, tree stumps and stretched wire that may be concealed by snow.
 - Do not snowmobile on waters where the ice is not at least a solid 6-inches thick.
- Because snowmobile theft can be a problem, owners should always take the keys out of the ignition when the machine is parked and chain and padlock it to a tree when leaving it unattended. Never leave a snowmobile running while unattended.

According to the Department of Natural Resources, snowmobilers can look forward to new trails later this season in the northwest, extending from Petoskey to East Jordan; in the central Lower Peninsula, from Gaylord to Frederic and Gaylord to East Jordan; and in the northeast Lower Peninsula, from Atlanta to Millersburg.

Additionally this season, 16 new groomers have been added to the 77 maintaining trails. Approximately $1.7 million of the state gas tax and $1 million in snowmobile registration fees are spent annually to maintain, improve and expand trails.

Inkster heavyweight wins gold medal at Allen Park tourney

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Inkster heavyweight Fred Davis launched the 1992-93 wrestling season with an impressive showing at the Allen Park Invitational.

Davis, an All-Area selection a year ago, pinned all three of his opponents en route to a first-place and a gold medal. He was one of three Inkster grapplers who won medals at the downriver tourney.

Sam Ellis, beginning his sophomore season as head coach, said he was pleased with the initial effort of his team.

"I felt good after the meet," Ellis said. "These kids showed desire and a lot of aggressiveness. We're going in the right direction."

Davis began his bid for the gold with a 1:21 pin over Matt Geiger of Wayandotte. He then disposed of Ed Hines of Airport in 1:35. In the finals, it took Davis a mere 35 seconds to erase Fordson wrestler Reabeh Hammond from the path.

Inkster came away with a silver medal thanks to the efforts of 103-pounder Anthony Melchor. Melchor, a freshman, lost his bid for the gold when he dropped a 15-3 decision to Fordson senior Joe DeLage.

The Viking grappler stopped Don Smith of Dearborn, 13-5, in the first round and also posted a 7-5 victory over Dave Cooper of Allen Park.

Ellis said he was also impressed by Thuron Edwards, a 160-pound sophomore, and Royal Gaines, who is also a sophomore that competes at 189.

"These kids never quit," Ellis said. "And they're going to win their share of matches."

Wyandotte captured the Allen Park Invitational title with 172.5 points and Dearborn was runner-up with 114. The two leaders were followed in the final standings by Airport (138), Fordson (132.5), Allen Park (103), Inkster (43) and Clarenceville (33).

The Vikings will return to the matches tonight when they compete in a triangular meet against Lutheran West and Southgate Aquinas.

Over 30 hockey Wayne heating stays hot on the ice

Wayne Heating remains hot on the ice.

Backed by a seven-goal assault and goaltender Terry Yackley's superb efforts in the net, undefeated Wayne Heating and Cooling stunned Daly's Drive-In, 7-0, in the Wayne-Westland Over 30 Hockey Conference.

The winners got a pair of goals from Kevin Longuski while mates Harry Kuk, Gerry Kmet, Jeff Addley, Wayne Robert and Jim Knipp each added single tallies for the victors.

Steve Goldener, Drew Hurley, Robert, Dan Ward and Jay Middaugh all had assists.

Wayne Heating has piled up an enviable 10-0-3 record.

In the meantime, Daly's continues its quest for its first win of the 1992 campaign.

In other Over-30 action, Jerry Robertson drilled a goal with 4:11 remaining that enabled Alternative Funeral Services to tie first-place N/C Servo. The 1-10-2 Alternative Funeral Services skaters also received goals from Dan Demers and Jim Creekmore.

Mickey The Crusher McGraw chipped in with two assists.

N/C Servo responded with goals off of sticks of Ed Harmon, Ed Spontack and Dave Frankling. N/C remains atop of their division thanks to an impressive 9-3-1 record.

In the meantime, Paddy's Pub and Little Bill's Trophy battled to a stalemate as each team scored two goals.

Jerry Moses and Bill Bower came through for Little Bill's Trophy with a goal and an assist apiece late in the contest. However, Paddy's struck back with Steve Wildman who scored both of the team's goals.

Independent Floor Covering came up with a stunning 5-4 victory over torrid-skating Harlow Tire, snapping the loser's seven-game winning streak.

Bob Bowen carried the load for Independent Floor Covering as he scored a coveted hat trick. He also carded an assist. Jay Harris and Peter Cusman added single goals.

Chuck Quint, Jim Fisher and Donald Middaugh also had assists.

Independent improved its overall record to 7-5-1 on the year.

On the other side of the ledger, Dave Tiger Milam, Dave Fishwick, Larry Holt, and Bob Wendell Jones fired in goals for the Harlow Tire club, whose record dipped to 8-3-2 on the year.

Jones also had three assists. Garden City Association turned back Jake's Again by a 3-1 score.

Jim Drewry, Doug Morrison and Greg Barbaza netted goals for the victors. Larry Fix, Jerry Peterson and Gary Swain each had assists. Drewry also received the Penalty Bonus and a one-game suspension.

Jake's averted the shutout thanks to Al Farina's goal. Assisting on that goal was Jim Ogozaly.

Jake's Again begins the week with a 6-4-3 record.

P.C. Outlet looked good against Howell Tool & Gage as Ken Langlois scored a goal and an assist in a 3-1 P.C. victory.

Bob Shureb and Mike Meat Cleaver added a goal each for the winners, who also received assists from Mark Giordano, Ernie Hunter and Mike Taylor.

P.C. Outlet is riding the crest of a 6-6-1 record into Sunday evening's confrontation with Paddy's.

Clyde Ayers' goal gave the losers their only tally for the evening. Dave Hunt and Chuck Kvasnovsky went into the scorebook with assists.

In the only other game, Sportswear Design buried the Top of the Lamp, 6-3.

Jeff Wozniak scored the hat trick to lead the winners while Ed Schechter notched a pair of goals. Dennis LaPensee connected once and teammate Dave Lehman earned four assists.

Sportswear improved its record to 9-3-1 on the season.

Walt Fischhoff accounted for two of the three Top of the Lamp goals and Ray Matthews added a goal and two assists. Marty McLaughlin earned the Penalty Bonus and will be forced to sit out the next game.

The Dec. 20 schedule is loaded with action. On Sunday at the Wayne Arena, Howell will open the evening with a match against Little Bill's Trophy, then at 7:15, Independent takes on GCA. The nightcap at Wayne, scheduled for 8:30 p.m. pits Harlow Tires against N/C Servo.

Meanwhile, over at the Westland Area, at 5 p.m. Paddy's tests its skating power against P.C. Outlet. The 6:15 p.m. contest will pit the undisputed class of the conference, Wayne Heating & Cooling against Sportswear and at 7:30 p.m. AFS takes to the ice against Jake's.

In the finale, at 7:45 p.m., it's the Top of the Lamp versus Daly's.

Tourney time Great Lakes Invitational tournament dates set

Dates for the prestigious 28th annual Great Lakes Invitational Hockey Tournament have been set.

The tournament which features some of Michigan's top skaters, including several former Plymouth-Salem and Canton High stars, will be staged Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 26-27 at the Joe Louis Arena in Detroit.

The first game, which pits Michigan Tech against the University of Michigan, is slated for 5 p.m. while Northern Michigan will take to the ice at 8 p.m. and will take on Michigan State.

The two winners will decide the championship at 4:30 p.m. on Sunday while the losers will play in a consolation game at 1 p.m.

Salem

grabbed 14 rebounds to go along with his 19-point contribution.

Salem got off to a shaky start against Monroe and had trouble finding the basket early in their season opener. The Rocks lead 13-11 and 26-22 after the first two quarters, then Monroe came back to snatch the lead away thanks to a 24-15 scoring advantage in the third period.

Down by 10 with four minutes left, it was Mike Slone's heroics that brought the Rocks back. He fired in 10 of his career high 33 points in the final frame that turned the tide. Also in that decisive fourth, Brian Jensen scored all of his six points and Head chipped in with seven of his 10.

Monroe also pulled off the coup with their long-range artillery. The Trojans connected on four treys in the third period, forcing Brodie to adjust his defense.

"I am happy with the progress of our team," Brodie said. "We have a couple of tough games this week."

Red Berenson has the advantage of 18 returning letterman this season.

The Michigan Tech Huskies have new leadership behind the bench in first-year coach Bob Mancini.

Mancini previously coached at Ferris State University where he led his team to third place in the CCHA (1990), the Bulldogs' best-ever finish, and sixth-place in 1991.

Tech currently ranks seventh in the WCHA with a 5-8-1 record.

After a 1991 season-finish that led them to the Final Four in Albany, New York, the Spartans of Michigan State face off against Northern Michigan in Game No. 2. The Spartans have earned the GLI title five times since their debut in the tournament in 1967.

MSU is currently ranked fifth in the CCHA and has compiled a 8-4-1 record during the current campaign.

The addition of Northern Michigan University Wildcats as the invitational team makes the 1992 tournament an "all-Michigan" affair. Now holding sixth in the WCHA, the Wildcats swept the Thanksgiving weekend series over Colorado College winning two cliffhangers 5-4 and 3-2. NMU head coach Rick Comley is 10th on the all-time college hockey coaches' won-lost list with an overall 417-302-38.

In GLI history, Northern has appeared only twice in the tournament. The Wildcats finished in third place in 1983 and fourth in 1989.

Tickets for the two-day tournament are available at the Joe Louis Arena and Cobo Arena Box Offices.

3000GT defines luxury and performance

Other technological oddities include the Active Aero System designed to enhance traction and the Active Exhaust which permits drivers to lower interior noise at speeds below 3,000 rpm. Available in two new colors, the 1993 3000GT is that much closer to realizing the ultimate personal sport vehicle at a competitive price.

Winter travelers warned

"Avoid travelling by car in a storm, but if you must, have emergency supplies in the truck. Also keep your gas tank full for emergency use and to keep the fuel line from freezing," the public safety director said. "If you do get stuck, stay with your vehicle. Do not try to walk to safety. Tie a brightly colored cloth to the antenna for rescuers to see. Start the car and use the heater for about 10 minutes every hour. Keep the exhaust pipe clear so that fumes won't back up into the car, and keep one window slightly open to let in air."
